INTRODUCTION

It may come as a surprise to those not intimately acquainted with the collections of the John Carter Brown Library to discover that it houses a distinguished collection on maritime history. But when one reflects on the origins of the Library, its particular view of American history and the steady but uninterrupted growth of its collections during almost a century and a half, the emergence of a strong and distinct group of books, maps, and manuscripts about the sea becomes more readily understood.

For 117 years, from 1721 when James Brown (1689-1739) became part owner in the sloop _Four Bachelors_ to 1838 when Brown and Ives disposed of their last ship, _Hanover_, four generations of the Browns of Providence Plantations were deeply involved in the sea as merchants and as ship owners. Indeed, the first book now in the Library to be owned by the family is _The English Pilot. The Fourth Book_, London, 1745. It was purchased by Captain James Brown (1724-1751), the elder of the more celebrated four brothers, Nicholas, Joseph, John and Moses. His death at sea at the age of twenty-seven is recorded on the flyleaf. Many of the books in this list came originally from the offices of the Brown family business where they were used in the day to day operations of the firm which stretched from the Baltic to the western Pacific. They came to the Library with the archives and library of the business in 1923.

The significance of maritime history in the early history of the Americas begins with Christopher Columbus, first and foremost a navigator whose single greatest achievement, as Samuel Eliot Morison has pointed out, was a triumph of navigation. With the discovery of America, Europeans developed new skills for sailing into unknown seas and out of sight of land for many weeks and even months. The maritime aspect of the impact of America on Europe has always been an essential part of the Library's interests. This was early exemplified when in 1848 John Carter Brown purchased a copy of the first Spanish navigational manual, Martín Fernández de Enciso's _Suma de Geographia_, Seville, 1519.

The strength of the collection was first emphasized forty-two years ago when the Librarian, Lawrence C. Wroth, wrote _The Way of a Ship, An Essay on the Literature of Navigational Science_, Portland, Maine, 1937. Based almost entirely on books in the Library, this classic survey of the subject has been a basic guide for a number of collections formed since. His _Some American Contributions to the Art of Navigation, 1519-1802_, Providence, 1947, expanded on some of the more strictly American aspects of the theme.

The immediate occasion for the preparation of this hand-list is two-fold. In 1978 Dr. Francis Chafee of Providence presented the Library with his collection of over 100 maritime books dating from 1673 to the mid-19th century. Among them was an all but complete run of Nathaniel Bowditch's _The New American Practical Navigator_ from 1802 to the last privately printed edition of 1867. This gift recalled that in 1940 Dr. Chafee's father Zechariah had given the Library over seventy-five books of nautical interest. Upon investigation it emerged that a great many of the books in both collections had originally belonged to the late Thomas Card who had married Dr. Chafee's sister. Thus in accepting the gift we were reuniting a collection which had earler been separated. The other stimulus was the development of a series of educational and academic programs at Mystic Seaport centered around the Munson Institute, in particular the recent Williams College-Mystic Seaport Program in American Maritime Studies. Our earlier materials nicely complement the collections in the G.W. Blunt White Library which is but three-quarters of an hour away. Clearly the John Carter Brown Library could be of use to a sister library who is a near neighbor. The result was the decision about a year ago to undertake a survey of the Library's maritime holdings. Because of the need it was done with some speed and confined to those items which could be easily identified and presented in a brief form. It is a finding list and not an exhaustive study of the Library's resources on the subject. For instance, a large collection of voyages has not been included because its existence is already well known and it would have unduly delayed the completion of the work. In a sense an exception is the section on Sir Francis Drake. Some of the books about him belonged either in the section on piracy and privateering or in the section on naval warfare. It was decided to avoid choosing and to devote a special section to all the material in the Library on one of the major figures in English maritime history.

The compilation of the list was carried out by Danial Elliott, Bibliographical Assistant, who also typed the whole manuscript for publication. At various times the work was read and commented on by Jeannette D. Black, Benjamin W. Labaree, Gerald Morris, John H. Parry, and David B. Quinn. We are grateful for their helpful suggestions.

FOREWORD

This preliminary inventory of maritime works in the John Carter Brown Library is presented in sections by subjects, as listed in the table of contents. Within each subject area the entries are arranged in chronological order. Each separate entry is numbered and contains the author's name; a short title of the book or manuscript; an abridged form of the place and date of publication and name of printer; and a short collation to indicate the length and format of the work and the presence, if any, of illustrations or maps. Further information, usually a short note indicating the work's place in maritime history or explaining its nautical interest if this is not readily apparent from the title, follows the description of the work. Since this list is primarily a finding list and not a descriptive bibliography, references to standard maritime bibliographies are included to provide the reader with access to more detailed descriptions of the works. The entry concludes with the Library's shelf-mark for the item.

There are two indices at the end of the inventory: a subject index which expands the broad divisions in the body of the inventory, and an author-title index. Numbers in the indices refer to entries, not pages.

In addition to the bibliographies cited in the list of references, two works still in manuscript were consulted through the kindness of the authors: John Alden's _European Americana: A chronological guide_, and James Barron's _A bibliography of pirate materials, 1700-1771_.

APPENDIX

Prize cases from the High Court of Appeals for Prizes, 1780-1782 [entry 791A].

This collection of 71 printed appeals was originally gathered by a member or an official of the Court. Each case is annotated with the date of hearing and frequently with notes concerning the disposition of the case. The original owner had them bound in four volumes in the order in which they were heard. Normally each case consists of four documents: the Appellant's and Respondent's case and an appendix to both. A few cases have additional documents.

At some time in the past the volumes were rebound and the contents rearranged. In the process some documents and perhaps some cases were lost. The list which follows is in the original order which is made possible by the foliation in manuscript by the original owner. The entries consist of the date the case was heard, the name of the vessel, its rig as stated in the case, its original country or place of origin, and the date it was last captured. Some of the cases involved vessels that changed hands a number of times.
